Whistleblowing policy

It is important to the Association that any fraud, misconduct or wrongdoing by staff or others working on behalf of the Association is reported and properly dealt with. The Association therefore requires all individuals to raise any concerns that they may have about the conduct of others in the Association or the way in which the Association is run.

This policy sets out the way in which individuals may raise any concerns that they have and how those concerns will be dealt with.

Scope

The Public Interest Disclosure Act 1998 amended the Employment Rights Act 1996 to provide protection for workers who raise legitimate concerns about specified matters in the public interest. These are called "qualifying disclosures". A qualifying disclosure is one made by an employee who has a reasonable belief that:

- a criminal offence;
- a miscarriage of justice;
- an act creating risk to health and safety;
- an act causing damage to the environment;
- a breach of any other legal obligation; or
- concealment of any of the above;

is being, has been, or is likely to be, committed. It is not necessary for the worker to have proof that such an act is being, has been, or is likely to be, committed - a reasonable belief is sufficient. The worker has no responsibility for investigating the matter - it is the Association’s responsibility to ensure that an investigation takes place.

A worker who makes such a protected disclosure has the right not to be dismissed, subjected to any other detriment, or victimised, because he/she has made a disclosure.

The Association encourages workers to raise their concerns under this procedure in the first instance. If you are not sure whether or not to raise a concern, you should discuss the issue with your line manager or a Director. You can also access a free advice line via Protect (https://protect-advice.org.uk/advice-line-2/), a charity that can advise employees considering whistleblowing to help distinguish between genuine whistleblowing concerns and what may be other complaints.

If you wish to raise a qualifying disclosure relating to the acts or omissions of a Director, you should raise the matter with the Chief Executive, or if it is related to the Chief Executive, to the Chair of Council.

If the concern relate to your line manager, a Director or the Chief Executive and you do not feel comfortable raising the issue in line with the Escalation Table, you can contact HR Services Partnership for initial advice. Should it be necessary, HR Services Partnership can make contact with the appropriate manager or Trustee if required.
Principles

- Everyone should be aware of the importance of preventing and eliminating wrongdoing at work. Staff and others working on behalf of the Association should be watchful for illegal or unethical conduct and report anything of that nature that they become aware of.
- Any matter raised under this procedure will be investigated thoroughly, promptly and confidentially, and the outcome of the investigation reported back to the person who raised the issue.
- No employee or other person working on behalf of the Association will be victimised for raising a matter under this procedure. This means that the continued employment and opportunities for future promotion or training of the worker will not be prejudiced because they have raised a legitimate concern.
- Victimisation of an individual for raising a qualified disclosure will be a disciplinary offence.
- If misconduct is discovered as a result of any investigation under this procedure the Association's disciplinary procedure will be used, in addition to any appropriate external measures. Failure to report wrongdoing can be a disciplinary matter.
- Maliciously making a false allegation is a disciplinary offence.
- An instruction to cover up wrongdoing is itself a disciplinary offence. If told not to raise or pursue any concern, even by a person in authority such as a manager, you should not agree to remain silent. You should report the matter to the appropriate level as per the escalation table below.

Procedure

This procedure is for disclosures about matters other than a breach of an employee's own contract of employment. If you are concerned that your own contract has been, or is likely to be, broken, you should use the Association's Grievance Procedure.

Stage 1

In the first instance, any concerns should be raised with your line manager. If you believe your line manager to be involved, or for any reason do not wish to approach your line manager, then you should proceed straight to stage 3.

Stage 2

Your line manager will arrange an investigation of the matter (either by investigating the matter themselves or immediately passing the issue to someone in a more senior position). The investigation may involve you and other individuals involved giving a written statement. Any investigation will be carried out in accordance with the principles set out above. Your statement will be taken into account, and you will be asked to comment on any additional evidence obtained. Your line manager (or the person who carried out the investigation) will then report to the Chief Executive who will take any necessary action, including reporting the matter to any appropriate government department or regulatory agency. If disciplinary action is required, your line manager (or the person who carried out the investigation) will report the matter to the HR Services Partnership – for advice - and start the disciplinary procedure. On conclusion of any investigation, you will be told the outcome of the investigation and what the Association has done, or proposes to do, about it. If no action is to be taken, the reason for this will be explained.

Stage 3

If you are concerned that your line manager is involved in the wrongdoing, has failed to make a proper investigation or has failed to report the outcome of the investigations to the relevant person, you should escalate the matter to the appropriate person as set out in the Escalation Table at the end of this document.
This person will arrange for a review of the investigation to be carried out, make any necessary enquiries and make their own report to the next person in the Escalation Table. Any approach to the more senior person will be treated in confidence and unless absolutely necessary, your identity will not be disclosed without your prior consent.

Stage 4

If on conclusion of stages 1, 2 and 3, you reasonably believe that the appropriate action has not been taken, you should report the matter to the proper authority. The legislation sets out a number of bodies to which qualifying disclosures may be made.

These include:

- HM Revenue & Customs;
- the Financial Services Authority;
- the Office of Fair Trading;
- the Health and Safety Executive;
- the Environment Agency;
- the Director of Public Prosecutions; and
- the Serious Fraud Office.
